Dear Senator:

Seven months ago my ex-husband took off with our son just before the custody hearing. I have found out through a friend and distance cousin where Michael and his father live and the school Michael attends.

After the hearing my lawyer informed me that Judge Glickman ordered a probation report done. She also mention that my ex-husband was in contempt of court and was in violation of Michael's and my rights.

I have learned that in December of 1980 the Parental Kidnaping Act was passed. This act mentioned that the Federal Parent Locator Service will handle child-snatching cases along with tracking down parents who desert their families. On March 18th the Star-Ledger ran an article mentioning the establishment in May of this service in Newark. Will this service handle child-snatching cases and does New Jersey consider parental kidnapping a felony.

Again it has been seven months since the court hearing and I have not received a call from the probation department nor has my lawyer heard from Judge Glickman concerning his order. I would appreciate any information you have on this problem.

Also, my I compliment you on your support and legislation concerning women rights, the elderly, poor, working class and minorities.

Sincerely,

M. Lipman
